The Frankenslag Code, or How the Kanzeon Mystery Can Be Solved

Do you want to wake up?

Then develop:

- Body Intelligence
- Group Intelligence
- Verbal Intelligence
- Emotional Intelligence
- Leadership Intelligence

Maybe also:

- Priest Intelligence

Big Mind: Do the Big Mind Process (with Genpo Roshi or one of his successors).

Big Heart: Again, do the Big Mind Process.

Big Belly: Do the Three Steps Exercise.

Third Step      Give up your ideologies.
                      Learn to listen.
                      Own the Voice of Power.

Second Step     Untie your family constrictions.
                      If you are still a boy, become a man. (Iron John)
                      If you are still a girl, become a woman. (Wassilissa)
                      Let the Voice of Sexual Drive mature.

First Step        Give up all your addictions, one by one.
                      Start with alcohol, then quit smoking.
                      Go on, looking for the next addiction.
                      Practice the Voice of No-Hope.

And, of course, do zazen for ten, twenty or thirty years!

Some Thoughts On the Period Before Shoken and Jukai

We are born and do The First Step. We admit we are powerless, and at the same time we trust this strange, new, dangerous world. Help will hopefully arrive, and it does.

We are seven years old, and we do The Second Step. Again we enter a strange and new world. Boys leave the women's world, and enter the world of men. Some form of introspection is introduced. Girls realize they aren't married to Daddy, but belong in the women's world. They also receive a fitting introspection method.

Then at fourteen, our bodies have ripened, and it is time for The Third Step. New rules are given and accepted. New horizons open up.

At twenty-one we celebrate The Third Step Completed. We are grown-up now, and enter the community of the grown-ups. Yet, we are like a baby! So the second half of this fourth ceremony is called: The First Step Revisited. Again we admit our powerlessness, again we wait for help, from the outer and inner world.

At twenty eight (or so) our comfortable lives become a little bit uneasy, and like Siddhartha Gautama, we may start a spiritual quest. The fifth ceremony: Shoken.

Some years later we may admit we are Buddha, in other words: we receive Jukai.

Et cetera. Now, two questions arise.

Did we, grown-ups, really receive the first four initiations?

If not, how then can we give them to our children?

Inwijdingen voor volwassenen, vaders, moeders en kinderen

Een schematisch overzicht

De eerste reeks (formele) inwijdingen ontvangen wij, volwassenen, als we lid worden van een esoterisch genootschap.

Voorbeeld: Bij zen ontvangen we shoken, jukai, et cetera.

Als we vader of moeder worden van ons eerste kind, begint de tweede reeks inwijdingen. Elke zeven jaar een nieuwe inwijding, de laatste ontvangen we als het kind, immiddels volwassen, vijfendertig jaar oud is.

De derde reeks bestaat uit de inwijdingen die ons kind zelf ontvangt. Ook die reeks eindigt als het kind vijfendertig jaar wordt.

De vierde reeks is pikant: dat zijn de inwijdingen die wij, volwassenen, als kind hebben ontvangen, of juist hebben gemist... met alle gevolgen van dien.

De vijfde reeks is een bonusreeks en begint bij de geboorte van ons eerste kleinkind.

Finding Your Big Mind

Genpo Merzel Roshi

We are all born with the unborn Buddha Mind, what I call Big Mind, an inner awareness that we are connected with others and our environment—literally One Mind. But something happens as we grow up; we begin to make distinctions and to separate ourselves from the rest of the world. We trade the Big Mind we are born with for another mind that centers around the small self. That self then becomes our number one preoccupation.

The small mind always looks at the world from the center called “me.” The arrow points “out there” so everything else appears to be on the outside. And when we look “out there,” we feel rather empty, unimportant and incomplete “in here.” Naturally want arises; we want to feel better, more complete. As long as we believe that something outside ourselves can make us feel whole, we will be driven to grasp at things. Dissatisfaction and anxiety will haunt us because we have traded Big Mind for a narrow, self-centered one. This unrest is what the Buddha called ignorance. We ignore our intrinsic wholeness.

The point of spiritual practice is to return to our original mind, which is Big Mind. When our mind is not divided, there simply is no conflict. In Zen we turn our own light inward to find our way back to original mind.

An easy exercise can give you a glimpse into the true nature of your mind. Take a few minutes to look inside and ask yourself this simple question. “How big is this mind?” Really look! Don’t imagine what you think you should find; look for yourself.

Can you grasp the size of your mind? No, it is ungraspable. Can you find a beginning? an end? Can you find a birth or death? No. Anything that you find has been invented by the small mind.

In Big Mind we experience no separation, no outside, no inside, no point and no center. Even though we experience this incomprehensible Heart-Mind, our separate and frightened self wants to believe that something bigger than ourselves has everything in control; so we keep looking for God “out there.” The secret known by all the mystics is that God can be found only when we give up our efforts to control and understand our life. Such striving is really unnecessary. When we give up our small perspective and come from Big Mind what is there that we don’t know?

When we look inside and let go, we can come from Big Mind and see that there is no need to control any of it. When we allow everything to just be, it all functions perfectly, exactly the way we want because we give up wanting it to be any other way. The trick is to let go of wanting. When we give up our preconceptions of where the snow should fall and let it fall where it falls, then there is no question about what to do. Grab a shovel. Instead of fighting and resisting, we can simply take care of each situation as it happens. So put the car in neutral. Relax and let be. Appreciate how everything is functioning perfectly.

How easy is it to experience this Big Mind? The question is: How difficult is it to put aside the controlling self? It can take years, or with the right preparation, a few minutes. There is a breakthrough process leading directly to Big Mind. It’s a technique I’ve developed out of Hal Stone’s Voice Dialog therapy. Through this approach we become acquainted with the different functions—the voices—of the small self; appreciate them and then ask them to step aside for awhile, to allow the original mind to emerge.

One of the first voices to explore in this process is the voice of the Controller. Take a few minutes to experience this voice; appreciate its value in your practical life. Could you function without it? Now ask it to rest awhile. You may have been thinking the Controller was the real you, but get to know some other dimensions of yourself. There are many voices to explore on the way to Big Mind. The truth of the voices lies in their expression, their being. Be the voice of the Vulnerable Child. Sit with it. What is your vulnerable child like? Speak as the Protector, the Damaged Self, the Skeptic, the Seeker. Many on the spiritual path are already acquainted with the Seeker. It’s the mind that brings us to the path. Yet, can the Seeking Mind ever be what it seeks?

Now shift to the Non-Seeking mind. Let all objectives simply drop away and experience this space. One participant at a recent workshop described his own experience this way: “Here [in non-seeking mind] is a sanctuary, entirely in the present, yet part of a continuum extending to the ends of the universe, incorporating birth and death. Here is ‘Big Mind’ encompassing everything.” Whether you’re in that space or not; Big Mind is your mind.

Zeven Stappen van de Zen Student

Stap zeven

Kaal kom ik van de berg en ik schenk de wijn van de vreugde.

Stap zes

Ik ben één met Big Mind en Big Heart.

Stap vijf

Ik ben één met mijn ouders en mijn Leraar.

Stap vier

Ik adem uit en ga dood. Ik adem in en verrijs.

Ik kom thuis.

Ik dien mijn broeders en zusters.

Stap drie

Aan U geef ik mij over - ik buig voor Sangha.

Ik luister.

Het einde van onwetendheid.

Stap twee

Overall zie ik mijn genezing - ik buig voor Dharma.

Ik buig voor mijn ouders in dankbaarheid.

Het einde van haat.

Stap een

Ik geef toe dat ik machteloos ben - ik buig voor Boeddha.

Ik geef.

Het einde van hebzucht.

Enkele boeddhistische termen in een notendop

De vier edele waarheden

1. De vaststelling van lijden
2. De oorzaak van het lijden in de behoeftigheid
3. De mogelijkheid van bevrijding
4. Het pad van inzicht, deugd en meditatie dat tot bevrijding leidt

Het achtvoudige pad

Inzicht:

de juiste zienswijze
het juiste besluit

Deugd:

het juiste spreken
het juiste handelen
de juiste wijze van levensonderhoud

Meditatie:

de juiste inspanning
de juiste aandacht
de juiste concentratie

Het achtvoudige pad vormt de inhoud van de vierde edele waarheid. De term 'juist' bij ieder element betekent: harmonisch afgestemd op de andere elementen van het pad.

De drie vergiften

Begeerte
Afkeer
Verwarring

De drie vergiften houden ons in hun greep gevangen en verzieken daarmee het leven voor onszelf en voor de anderen.

De vier kenmerken van bevrijding

Liefde (Metta)
Mededogen (Karuna)
Vreugde (Mudita)
Onbevangenheid (Upekkha)

Bevrijd van de greep van de drie vergiften stralen we in ons handelen spontaan deze vier kenmerken uit.

Karma

Letterlijk: werking, handelen de wet van oorzaak en gevolg;
bij uitbreiding: verantwoordelijkheid

De drie kenmerken van de werkelijkheid

Lijden (Duhkha)
Vergankelijkheid (Anitya)
Niet-zelf (Anatman)

Deze drie kenmerken zijn eenvoudige vaststellingen over de aard van de werkelijkheid waarin we leven.

De twee perspectieven van waaruit we naar de werkelijkheid kunnen kijken

De conventionele werkelijkheid: de werkelijkheid zoals we ze dagelijks zien, ze denken en erin handelen.
De uiteindelijke werkelijkheid: de werkelijkheid gezien vanuit een radicale openheid, ontdaan van alle conventies, concepten en illusies.

De twee elementen van meditatie

Shamatha: stoppen, tot rust komen
Vipashyana: kijken

De vruchten van het pad

Wijshheid (Prajna)
Mededogen (Karuna)

Wijshheid en mededogen kunnen niet onafhankelijk van elkaar bestaan. Mededogen is de vanzelfsprekende verwerkelijking van wijsheid.

De zes paramita's

Geven (Dana)
Deugd (Shila)
Bevatten (Kshanti)
Inzet (Virya)
Meditatie (Dhyana)
Wijshheid (Prajna)

De paramita's zijn activiteiten die in hun vervolmaking (paramita) leiden tot bevrijding.

De vijf deugden (Shila)

Niet doden; respect voor het leven
Niet stelen; vrijgevigheid
Geen seksueel misbruik; respect voor de ander
Geen incorrect gebruik van de taal; oprechtheid
Geen gebruik van bedwelmende middelen; helderheid van geest

De drie juwelen

Boeddhisme

Letterlijk: ontwaakte
Eretitel gegeven aan Siddhartha Gautama, de wijze uit de clan van de Shakyans (Shakyamuni),
de historische Boeddh
Bij uitbreiding: de ontwaakte staat van alle levende wezens

Dharma

Letterlijk: de dingen, de verschijnselen, de werkelijkheid
Meestal gehanteerd als: de leer, de praktijk

Sangha

Letterlijk: harmonie
De gemeenschap van beoefenaars van de dharma
